Subject: Your letter dated September 29, 2014

Dear Mr. Pash,

Thank you for your letter of September 29, 2014, which you emailed to me and which you shared with the press.

In your letter you invited my client to be interviewed by the NFL's representative "on a confidential and appropriate basis." The fact that you chose to make public your request to interview our client confidentially causes us concern about whether the interview itself would be kept confidential or tweeted out by you as you did with your letter to me.

However, I am willing to meet with you to discuss your request and also to learn the answers to our important questions posed in my original letter to you (which was not shared with the press). Additional questions are posed in my press statement to which we also have not received your answers.

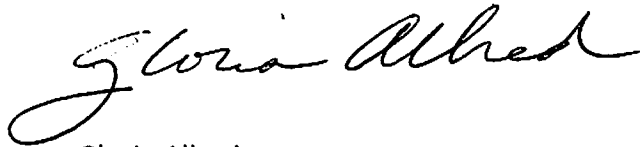

In considering whether our client will or will not be agreeable to meeting with your representative we would like to be assured that the NFL is acting in good faith and that it is conducting an investigation which encompasses not only the rape allegations but also why the player and the team involved did not report these matters immediately to the NFL as required by your NFL Personal Conduct Policy.

In other words, my client and I are not an NFL team and the NFL does not get to make all the rules in this situation. This is not a game of football or a sporting competition. It is real life and it concerns a serious allegation of sexual violence against a young woman.

I am available on Wednesday, October 8th, 2014 to meet with you in New York. Please advise me as soon as possible if you would like to meet me on that date either at NFL headquarters or at my office in New York.

Very truly yours,
