President Herbst's response made me feel invalidated all over again. And to question our motives? Our only motive is to get change, something she made clear was unnecessary. It was the most disappointing, invalidating and unreasonable response I've heard yet.

The President's address to the Board of Trustees was shocking, violent and hurtful. Hearing the leader of our university question our motives and describing our complaint as "astonishingly misguided" left me feeling more estranged than ever from the administration that is supposed to help and protect all of its students. We are Huskies too.

I was in shock, hurt and disappointed that someone with the power and authority to make a change simply dismissed us. She turned her back on her own students, the people she swore to protect. I do not feel safe on this campus, knowing that the President is more concerned about the school's image, than the safety of her students.

The President's address triggered for me all the trauma I had experienced at the university. The same sinking sense of betrayal I felt when reading her dismissive and demeaning address is one too familiar to me. Listening to my personal story labeled as "demonstrably untrue " and "astonishingly misguided" felt like I was re-experiencing the trauma incurred by the university's failure to protect me all over again.
